

CLIMATE TECH CASE STUDY

Transport

Arcola Energy

Scotland could soon see its first hydrogen-powered train created by a consortium of engineering and technology firms in 2021 debut at COP26.

The project leaders Arcola Energy will be responsible for the hydrogen fuel cell system engineering, design and integration, as well as the project demonstration. The project will form the basis of future opportunities in climate technologies towards transport.¹

View the website here.

¹ <https://www.theengineer.co.uk/scottish-hydrogen-train-debut-glasgow-cop26/>