CHERIF BICHARA ABDERAMAN

Profile

Cherif Bichara Abderaman is an enthusiastic project manager, digital developer and visual content creator, with extensive experience and knowledge in these areas.

He has recently completed a series of Level II modules in Applied Data Science and is keen to develop these skills alongside his existing transferable skills.

Experience of the Course

“What a wonderful journey I have been through the last few months by learning the R language. I found it very enjoyable and fun discovering the means of data, extracting knowledge, useful insights, and information from simple raw data... it is fascinating!

This module helped me learn R language and amaze myself on how quick we can discover very valuable information from any data that doesn't have any meaning in its raw format. It is like mining for gold, but instead we mine a real golden information that could help the human being.

With my new qualification, I am now looking for a job in data analytics and project management around this area. I have a variety of digital skills, and I am sure my abilities can help turn any raw data into a visual informative representation.”
